

INVITATION LETTER

Dear Prospective Reviewer,

The Editorial Board of Territorial Identity and Development (TID) invites you to participate at the peer review process of the manuscripts submitted to our journal. Your recommendations and assessment will ensure and increase the quality of TID. The policy of TID is that submitted papers undergo rigorous reviewing.

Territorial belonging and territorial attractiveness are elements with strategic relevance for development at diverse levels: local, regional, national, and macro-regional. Therefore, territorial identity is important both for building the social capital so useful during the processes of development and territorial planning and for the cohesion policy in the European Union and in other macro-regions of the world.

Our journal hosts the results of original empirical and theoretical scientific research on territorial identity as a resource for development, as well as book reviews. It offers specialists and practitioners with diverse backgrounds (Geography, History, Economy, Administrative sciences, etc.) the possibility of sharing their research results and best practice experience.

The topics of interest are the following: territorial identity and community development (rural and urban); territorial identity and regional development; territorial identity and territorial planning; territorial identity and public policy and research methodology for the study of territorial identity.

The Editorial Board of Territorial Identity and Development assures you that we are grateful for your consideration of our request. Please confirm below if you are willing to become part of our team of reviewers.

I agree to become a reviewer for RRGE (tick)
